There is a whisper that the New York leaders are divided between supporting Harrison and Alger when Depew gets out of the race. Then, too, there is much talk among the New York delegates about placing Warner Miller in the field in place of Depew.

The action of the New York caucus is awaited with great anxiety.

A crowd of Biaine or Busters is parading the streets yelling "Blaine and Harrison."

Every one felt that the critical moment of the convention had arrived when the strength of the various booms would be tested. The first ballot was awaited with the utmost anxiety. The Sherman men, who are certain to have a fair lead on the start, were nervous and restless. It was plainly to be seen that no candidate, even in the minds of his most enthusiastic friends, had a sure thing.

The Harrison men fitted hither and thither about the hall strengthening their lines at every possible point for the decisive test. All kinds of rumors were afloat as to possible and probable combinations. So great was the strain that the opening prayer fell upon unresponsive ears. Some of the delegates looked as though they would like to make a motion to dispense with the prayer altogether.

The convention has reached that stage at which all the interest in its proceedings culminates.

The decks have been cleared for action, and

The decks have been cleared for action, and the battle royal is about to begin.

What the first ballot will disclose is already known. The absorbing curiosity is to know what the third, or the fourth or fifth ballots will show.

The men who pull the wires have been up nearly all night and the air of the Convention Hall, as it begins to fill, is full of rumors, theories and blind guesses.

THE HOPE OF THE SHERMANITES. Sherman loomed up last night because of the great demonstration which Foraker's second of Gen. Hastings's nomination of the Ohio Senator's name provoked, but there was a feeling in the city that Sherman would win to-day, and if he does not win to-day he cannot win at all.

cannot win at all.

Yesterday's demonstration is generally believed to be more of a Foraker boom than a Sherman boost, but no one can separate the shouts for the Senator from the enthu-a Sherman boost, but no one can separate the shouts for the Senator from the enthusiasm for Foraker.

Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, who was at work for Sherman until the small hours of the morning, came into the Convention Hall with a weary and anxious air.

The Pennsylvania delegation is hard to handle, and there have been stories current all the morning that the Harrison people have succeeded in making strong impression there, and it is openly boasted that Quay cannot hold his men for Sherman longer than three ballots, and the most of the Fitler vote will go to Harrison after the first ballot.

But with all the talk and chatter and nods and winks of knowing ones who think they have the straight tip, the convention meets with no new known quantity to solve the puzzling problem before it.

The men who are seeking to prevent a great Blaine stampede at the start, but who are equally anxious to prevent the nomination of any other man, are watchful, but nervous and anxious.

This was anticipated.

They are being wrestled with or are themselves engaged in missionary work, while the leaders have been seeking to get together and agree upon some satisfactory ticket.

The pressure of admission to the hall on the outside was so great that its influence was felt in the auditorium-room itself.

Those who got in are excited over their efforts to get through the crowds and convince the doorkeepers that their tickets were all right.

the doorkeepers that their tickets were all right.

There has been a row between the local committee and the sub-committee of the National Committee having charge of the tickets, and Chairman Clarkson, of the former, and Sergt.-at-Arms Fitzsimmons have had an encounter over the dispute, in which, it is asserted, blows were passed.

Chairman Estee's deak was decorated with cut flowers this morning, and is almost hidden behind wreaths of roses and begonias.

The New York delegates have arrived and are taking their seats.

Mr. Depew, of course, is absent, and John Raines, of Monroe, represents him.

Judge Robertson, who will probably vote for Sherman after Depew, is seated next to Louis F. Payn, who is a follower of Platt.

Ex-Senator Warner Miller has an aisle seat, and is evidently wondering if the Vice-Presidency will come to him if Sherman should be nominated. The bald head of Gen. Husted looms up in the New York crowd.

Ex-Senator Gibbs is fanning himself and ex-Alderman Deane.

Sherid, a Shook entered the convention for the first time. He was sensible, and has escaped all the scorches and the heat in the hall for three days.

John J. O'Brien is modest, and is seated in the seventh row.

They have heard of the Sherman boom, and are determined to combine against him.

After the prayer Mr. Hiscock announced that the regular order of business was the calling of the roll for the nomination of President and Vice-President. The rule was read requiring a roll-call by States on each ballot, and that the balloting should continue until some candidate received a majority of the votes cast. the votes cast.

The Chairman of the Maryland delegation reserved the announcement of the two Blaine votes until the last and attempted to give it dramatic effect by raising his voice.

The galleries applauded, but the Chair rapped for order, stating that the audience must keep quiet until the end of the roll-call. Minnesota's vote was challenged by Delegate Henderson, and the delegation was polled without change in result.

As the balloting continued, the strength Gresham received from the Northwestern States and in the South elated his friends.

BLAINE.

An Assurance that He Would Accept.

If the Republicans Can Agree on No Other Man.

Gail Hamilton Explains Mr. Blaine's Attitude.

ISPECIAL CABLE TO THE EVENING WORLD ! Meleose, June 22. - Mr. Blaine and party have arrived here, and having visited the abbey and luncheoned proceeded to Abbots ford, where they will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Scott, descendants of the "Wizard of the North" and well known in New York.

A perfect army of reporters is now in Mr. Blaine's pursuit, and the trip is robbed of much of its charm owing to their intrusiveness. Some on horseback, some on bicycles and some in coaches, they dog every step of the party.

Owing to the credulity of the public and the lively imagination of many of these young gentlemen, I am once again requested to say that both Mr. Blaine and Mr. Carnegie wish it fully understood that since the party left London they have never been interviewed on politics or the work of the Chicago Convention.

Mr. Blaine is particularly emphatic in this matter, as he has received information which eads him to believe that he has been misrepresented by some of the less scrupulous corespondents who are following him.

Talking to-day with one whose name I need not mention when I say she is popularly and rightfully supposed to be Mr. Blaine's Egeria, the following statement was made to me for publication :

"Mr. Blaine is very much irritated," she said, "having been notified from America that he has been reported by cable as saying that were he nominated he would accept. Such most certainly is the case, but most certainly Mr. Blame never said anything of the kind. Those who start such reports well know Mr. Blaine's sense of duty, and that he would sacrifice his personal preferences to his sense of patriotism and for the Republican party, to which he has always been loyal and which has always been loyal to him.

Only in case the convention fails to agree upon another candidate and only when the unity of the Republican party demands it will Mr. Blaine consent to bear the standard, and this time Mr. Blaine feels sure that victory awaits the struggle, the Democratic party having quite declared themselves for the pernicious doctrine of free trade."

I can also say that he read this morning a careful summary of the Republican platform in the Edinburgh Scotsman, and amen to every sentiment it contains.

The calmness and composure with which Mr. Blaine is passing through the ordeal of these days is a surprise to all who thought to know him and his excitable temperament. He rarely reads the papers, receives no telegrams from London or Chicago, and seems o take no interest in the contest whatever.

Mrs. Blaine and the Misses Blaine, in whose minds the memory the last campaign is still fresh, ardently hope that some other candidate than their father will be chosen. Miss Gail Hamilton, however, has un doubtedly White House aspirations.

A London cable to the Press News Associa tion says : Cable despatches are being rapidly exchanged between Chicago and the Blain party in Scottland. The latter are kept promptly and minutely informed of every movement in the convention.

Great interest is being taken here in the proceedings and long abstracts of the Republican platform are published in the morning The Liberal Attack on the Government.

following up their great victory at the Ayr Burghs and the serious defeat of the Government in the House last Tuesday, which was exclusively announced in the United States by the cable despatches to the Press News Association, have decided that the time has come to deliver their main attack upon the Government while its lines are wavering and its Unionist allies threaten to bolt. They propose to challenge the Government on the whole administration of Ireland, leaving no act or abuse untouched, especially in the tyrannical execution of the Coercion Mr. Gladstone to-day gave notice of a motion to this effect and asked the Rt. Hon.

A Horse Who Can Talk!

Everybody has heard of a "horse laugh," but who has ever seen an equine gifted with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the leiegraph and the telephone have been a hundred years ago. Why even very recently a cure for consumption would have been looked upon as miraculous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it, if taken in time. This world-removated remeaty will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a besility state when all other means have failed. Thousands can gratefully testify to this. All druggists.
